Thomas Moore Health Clinic

The Thomas Moore Health Clinic is named in honor of Private First Class Charles Thomas Moore, a medical corpsman killed in Vietnam while rendering aid to his fellow soldiers. Please see his biography on the fact sheet page of the media kit.

Construction began on the clinic in Aug. 1999 and was completed in Feb. 2002. The building was designed by Cromwell Architects & Engineers and built by RKJ construction for just over $11 million.

The Thomas Moore Health Clinic is 63, 292 square feet, making it one of the largest clinics in the Department of Defense. It has 74 exam rooms and, when fully staffed, will have 27 providers on staff.

The clinic, located on the corner of 58th Street and 761st Tank Battalion Avenue, treats an estimated 30,000 beneficiaries to include active duty soldiers and their family members.

A number of services and departments have moved from Darnall Army Community Hospital to the Thomas Moore Health Clinic. These are the allergy and optometry clinics, the psychology service of the mental health department and the hearing conservation service.

The clinic also houses the Soldier Medical Readiness Center, previously in building 36001 on Fort Hood.
